- Strong friends and family relationships.
- Fast-moving, great for reluctant readers.
- Mystery and sci-fi appeal for both boys and girls.

Half the dots turned red. "This shows which phones have taken video in the last fifteen minutes." She beamed at the kids. "Who wants to see what those guys are filming down there?"

Amelia did. But she was also slightly freaked out by what Lady Naomi was doing. Could she really get into the memory of any mobile phone on the planet? Did that mean she could also look into any computer? And why would she want to do that? She thought about Callan shouting about the Illuminati, and wondered if it was really all that crazy an idea ...

Grawk let out a sharp bark of warning as a branch snapped under someone's foot, just outside the workstation.

Lady Naomi pressed a button and the holo-screen vanished. The whole clearing lit up as halogen lights flared. All three of them swung around to see who the intruder was.
